My Dear Friends in Christ,

If someone were to ask you, "what is the holiest day in the Church year", what would your answer be? Most, I dare say, would answer "Christmas"...and they'd be wrong! Now, don't get me wrong – I like Christmas as much as the next person, and in my life as a Franciscan the Incarnation has taken on a whole new meaning, but (liturgically, at least) it is second to Easter, the most sacred day of the Church Year. We begin our "final approach" into Easter (as well as our Holy Week services) with today's celebration of Palm Sunday of the Lord's Passion (interchangeably referred to as either "Palm Sunday" or "Passion Sunday" (due to our reading of the Passion Narrative today)).

Today is unique in that two gospel passages are read, one depicting Jesus' entrance into Jerusalem and one speaking to us of Jesus' Passion and Death. Both read at today's liturgy serve as "bookends" to our Holy Week services. The entrance of Jesus into Jerusalem (intoned at the beginning of Mass) speaks of the kingship of Christ, for it is a celebration befitting royalty, with people lining the streets offering shouts of praise and acclamation to Jesus. They recognize Jesus as Messiah at this moment, and pledge their loyalty to Him with shouts of "hosanna" (a word which means "save us" or "help", an appropriate cry made to Jesus). The interesting thing is that the same crowd who is crying "hosanna" is most likely the same crowd who, in a few short days, will be calling for blood with cries of "crucify him".

This is where the second gospel (read at the usual time) comes in. It is the telling of the Passion and Death of Jesus, about how He was betrayed and handed over to be killed just a few hours after celebrating the Last Supper (a Passover meal) with His disciples. This depiction of the last hours of Jesus' earthly life serve as a reminder to us of how much Jesus gave Himself for us, offering His life so as to save ours. The telling of this Passion narrative shows to us that Jesus, He without sin, became sin for us and won for us newness of life. Jesus did all of this without rebelling, without turning back, not shielding Himself from the torture and torment that He knew awaited Him. This is true love, the self-emptying love by which Jesus shows us how we are to act.

May this Passion/Palm Sunday be a fitting time for us to unite ourselves with Jesus. Let us make the long walk to Calvary with Him so that we might have a share in His Passion, Death and, ultimately, Resurrection. May we have the courage to not turn back, to not shy away from all that Jesus suffered, so that we might have a share in new and everlasting life!

Wishing You All A Blessed Holy Week,

Fr. Paul

MY FRANCISCAN JOURNEY

For Francis of Assisi, it is the love of God, the self-offering and surrender of control that comes with the Incarnation that is at the heart of what it means to talk about the suffering of Jesus on the cross. This sense of giving up control is seen in the way scholar Zachary Hayes describes the place of the cross in the spiritual world-views of Francis and Bonaventure. When we look at the mystery of Jesus, this evokes quite a different sense of the divine. When we think of the historical origins of Jesus, the poor circumstances of his life, the tragic historical ending on the cross, we must ask in what sense this is truly the incarnation of divine love.

For St. Francis and Bonaventure, such historical realities point our attention to the humble, tender elements of the world in order to discover important signals of the presence of the divine. How can one look at the figure on the cross without asking: What is the nature of creative and redemptive love? What is truly creative power? (Hayes, "Works of Bonaventure")

What it means to talk about love is laid out for us on the cross. And it is this sense of divine love—made concrete in the Incarnation and completed in the suffering on the cross—that was so transformative in the saint's own life. We must not forget how the legend of his initial conversion to religious life begins before the cross in the form of the now-famous San Damiano crucifix. Vorreux describes that experience of the saint before the cross and how the young would-be saint would understand what was depicted before him: God waiting for him over the altar was a great Byzantine Jesus that the poor man of Assisi particularly liked because it represented a redeemer at once friendly and triumphant. This savior did not seem to say to the faithful, "Look how I suffered for you!" but "Look how much I love you!" It was "a Christ of peace and persuasion." It is not a God who is vindictive, vengeful, sadistic, or punishing that speaks to the heart of believers, but a God of love. It is a God who suffered on the cross precisely because of love, not despite it. And this love, this passion for humanity, touched the life of this Italian saint's in a permanent, life-altering way.

After Francis' death, Bonaventure will talk about the "transformative power of love." Love is what moved the heart and mind of the saint from Assisi, and it is love that is the greatest force for change and good in our world. The cross, therefore, was not a sign of sin and death, but a sign of the tremendous power of love that speaks through the centuries, across all times and places, to the daily human experiences of true love. May we feel that self-sacrificial love as we enter into the mystery of the Passion, Death, and Resurrection of Christ.

Pax et Bonum,

Fr. Paul, OFS
